

National Association of Entrepreneurship

November 18, 2010

To: All Media

Contact: Mark Horning, Director of Communications

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

NAE to Partner with USCA and NCCA to Help Build Youth Character

The National Association of Entrepreneurship announced this week that the will co-sponsor a program know as Community Stars. This program will be run in conjunction with the National Coaches of Character Association and the United States Coaches Association.

“We recognize the important role coaches and athletics can play in student athletes’ lives. The right coach with the right tools can affect individuals, a team, or a community,” says Mike Orazen, NCCA Board Member and FireDex COO. “Being able to help deliver great programs through the generous support of NAE members will change lives.”

Community Stars grants will be available to municipalities, counties, school districts, special-purpose districts, tribal governments, and other public entities, as well as non-profits and community groups working with student athletes, age pre-K through college. They must also have a pre-selected vendor or program plan in place to make an application.

“We see tremendous coaches everyday who are dedicated to lifting up a generation,” say’s Mary Herrick, Executive Director of USCA. “Being able to help them implement programs that build life long character in their athletes is so important. We are pleased to be partnered with NAE to do just that.”

The National Association of Entrepreneurship is the voice of America's Mid-Market Leaders. Our members represent the driving force of free enterprise. NAE provides essential research, critical content, and unparalleled connectivity. NEA hosts a series of events annually, including the Free Enterprise forum, CEO Briefings Circuit, and the NAE Legislative and Technology Summits. NAE strives to advance the valuable role of free enterprise in the United States.

Learn why NAE is free enterprise at www.naeonline.org or (888) 400-7182.